Life cycle assessment and life cycle perspectives has started to be implemented in many ways in Indonesia, such as through:

- Sustainable Development Goal 12: Sustainable Consumption and Production,
- The new version of Environmental Management Systems ISO 14001:2015,
- As a tool to define materiality in GRI Sustainability Reporting Standard
- Ecolabel, green labelling, sustainable development tools,
- The SNI on Life Cycle Assessment

Very soon everything will be based on life cycle perspectives and industry has to adapt with the new perspective.

ILCAN is a voluntary initiatives with the mission to develop capacity building of its members and Indonesian industry. It consists of a pool of experts of LCA in Indonesia from different sectors, who will contribute their knowledge in this training sessions.
